

Canopy will save your project as a .dat file which can then be reloaded back into the application or shared with others to work on when desired. Therefore, if you are planning on working on multiple Canopy projects, you will just need to specify a unique name for each project file when you save.

You may need to change the options in your internet browser to allow you to specify where to save a downloaded file as the browser default may be set to save directly to your Downloads folder. Firefox is shown below.
